

D-Orbit Successfully Completes its Fifth ION Satellite Carrier Mission

ION is the first orbital transfer vehicle ever to perform a RAAN shift maneuver in space

Fino Mornasco, Italy, May 12, 2022: D-Orbit, the space logistics and orbital transportation company in the process of going public through a transaction with Breeze Holdings Acquisition Corp. (NASDAQ: BREZ), today announced the successful completion of the Company's fifth mission, Spacelust. The deployment phase of the mission ended after D-Orbit's versatile and cost-effective orbital transfer vehicle ("OTV"), ION Satellite Carrier ("ION"), successfully deployed a pair of small customer satellites from Kleos Space S.A. (ASX:KSS, Frankfurt:KS1, Kleos).

In addition, over the weeks preceding the final deployment operation, ION fired Dawn Aerospace's B20 thrusters and successfully performed a change in the orbit inclination and RAAN (Right Ascension of the Ascending Node) parameters to release KSF2a and KSF2b, the last two of the four Kleos' Patrol Mission satellites onboard. By changing the inclination and RAAN parameters, D-Orbit was able to help speed up the deployment of Kleos' satellite constellation by several months. Importantly, this operation demonstrates ION's capability to perform RAAN shift maneuvers which are complex orbital maneuvers in space, which has never before been demonstrated by an OTV.

"Another mission completed and another terrific job by our team at D-Orbit," said Renato Panesi, Ph.D., D-Orbit's Chief Commercial Officer. "We are proud to have served our customers on Spacelust. With each mission we complete, we are demonstrating the strength of our technology and our steady progression along our roadmap."

Spacelust began on April 1, 2022 with the launch of ION SCV 005 Almighty Alexius aboard a SpaceX Falcon 9 launch vehicle from the Space Launch Complex 40 (SLC-40) at Cape Canaveral, Florida. The ION Satellite Carrier completed the deployment phase on May 9, 2022, following the precise deployment of three satellites from the University of Chile's Space Exploration Laboratory \(SPEL\) and four satellites from Kleos Space S.A. via a Spaceflight Inc. contract.

The three satellites developed by SPEL's Faculty of Physical Sciences and Mathematics (FCFM) included PlantSat, a 3U CubeSat that will study the growth of a plant in low Earth orbit, and the Satellite of the University of Chile for Aerospace Investigation's (SUCHAI) nanosats, SUCHAI 2 and SUCHAI 3, which will perform basic science research funded by the U.S. Air Force Office of Scientific Research \(AFOSR\), the technical directorate of the Air Force Research Laboratory \(AFRL\).

For Kleos Space, a space-powered radio frequency reconnaissance data-as-a-service (DaaS) company, D-Orbit deployed four Patrol Mission satellites, KSF2, which joined the eight existing spacecraft in orbit to perform intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance (ISR) activities of governments and commercial entities to expose illegal activity on land and sea.

In addition, ION also hosts onboard a payload from Upmosphere, a start-up that offers customers an opportunity to launch smaller personal items that will travel around the Earth for several years aboard ION. The payload for this mission consists of a wooden UP-box containing mementos from four different clients.

The Company has four more ION launches scheduled for 2022. The sixth upcoming ION mission, Infinite Blue, is scheduled for later this month.

About D-Orbit and Its Proposed Business Combination with Breeze Holdings

D-Orbit is a market leader in the space logistics and transportation services industry with a track record of space-proven technologies and successful missions.

Founded in 2011, before the dawn of the New Space market, D-Orbit is the first company addressing the logistics needs of the space market. ION Satellite Carrier, for example, is a space vehicle that can transport satellites in orbit and release them individually into distinct orbital slots, reducing the time from launch to operations by up to 85% and the launch costs of an entire satellite constellation by up to 40%. ION can also accommodate multiple third-party payloads like innovative technologies developed by startups, experiments from research entities, and instruments from traditional space companies requiring a test in orbit.

D-Orbit is a space infrastructure pioneer with offices in Italy, Portugal, the UK, and the US; its commitment to pursuing business models that are profitable, friendly for the environment, and socially beneficial, led to D-Orbit S.p.A. becoming the first certified B-Corp space company in the world.

As previously announced on January 27, 2022, D-Orbit has entered into a business combination agreement among Breeze Holdings Acquisition Corp. (“Breeze Holdings”) (NASDAQ: BREZ), a publicly traded special purpose acquisition company, D-Orbit and a newly formed joint stock company (société anonyme) governed by the laws of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg (“Holdco”) pursuant to which Holdco will become the publicly traded parent company of Breeze Holdings and D-Orbit upon the closing of the transactions. The transaction is expected to close in the second or third quarter of 2022, subject to the satisfaction of customary closing conditions, including certain governmental approvals and the approval of the shareholders of Breeze Holdings and the contribution of the D-Orbit shares by the D-Orbit shareholders.
